THE NEW CONSTITUTION ADOPTED .- By a majority unprecedented in Maryland, the new constitution has been declared the organic law of the State. The returns are not all in; but enough is known to make the fact certain that an overwhelming vote has established the new constitution.

The earnestness with which we opposed the to the duty of facilitating its practical working, so that the inconveniences and difficulties ap-prehended from some of its omissions and imperfections may be, as far as possible, obviated We can live under the new constitution as well as others; and while it remains the supreme law, we are prepared to recognise allegiance to it and to render obedience. In the common lot we can take our part cheerfullyeven if it should come to that condition of Democracy made perfect, in which, there being times. no King in Israel, every man should be a law unto himself, and do what might seem good in

But, with some things in the new system which have not and never can have the concurrence of our judgment, there are other and good things would-but which, denied from that quarter, we must now take along with less acceptable items from the hands of a convention. Very Very well; as it is, so be it. The good State, we trust, and also our fair and goodly city, will still go on to prosper .- Baltimore American of

"Amen to that sweet prayer!" The American has ever been true to the interests of the State and city, but in matters involving change it has always stood so erect as to lean a little backward. The new constitution is not by any means perfect: but with the aid of the editors of the American, and others of well-merited influence, in "facilitating its practical working, so that the inconveniences and difficulties apprehended from some of its imperfections and omissions may be, as far as possible, obviated and removed," we shall look hopefully to the future. It has not hitherto been the affliction of Maryland that she has had no king. She has had many, however diminutive, and they have ruled with a heavy hand. By the new constitution each regal sceptre is broken; and the people have arisen, each to observe the course of conduct prescribed by the editor of the American unto paper by Mr. J. Holbrook. This little beginhimself, viz.: to recognise allegiance to the constitution, and to render obedience to it. Be sure of it, the editor enjoys a monopoly of the patriotism of the State no more than do the old cliques of its political control. Old things have

PRESIDENT FILLMORE AT NORFOLK. - The Whigs of this old city had a general meeting a few days since, and unanimously resolved that they have "the most unlimited confidence in Mr. Fillmore, and cordially approve of his administration, which has been conducted with that prudence and wisdom so well calculated to promote the great interests of the country, and harmonize the threatening elements of its different sections." It will be perceived in this, fifty shares remain to be taken. as in all other demonstrations that we have seen, that Mr. Fillmore is not named for another term. N'importe!

FROM RIO DE JANEIRO .- The bark Goldsailed from Rio on the 30th April. There had been no change in Coffee. The ship Banshee, Capt. Wingate, had been three days in port. The Greyhound, Capt. Pickett, which sailed from Baltimore in company with her, had not arrived. The Baltimore American says, that both these clipper ships left that port for Rio on a trial of speed. They sailed from Cape Henry on the 19th March, and the Banshee, therefore, made the passage in thirty-seven days; The fever was prevailing to a fearful on the 3d of May, and Daniel Rogers on the

So much for stateliness!

ALEXANDRIA. - The Gazette of yesterday says that the rise of real estate in that place, and the consequent increase of rents, is indicative of returning prosperity. "For many years past," it adds, "our property-holders have borne 'the heat and burden of the day,' and have borne it manfully. They have never faltered when a tax for a public improvement was proposed, the payment of the largest share of which fell upon them. We rejoice, then, that they are now about to reap a reward for their public spirit and perseverance, in the enhancement of the value of their houses and lots. They deserve all the return that they will receive. Nor will the whole public fail to share in the benefits enuring to them. When property rises in value we shall see new buildings springing up all around us. Our mechanics will find employment, and, we hope, their prosperity, too, will be commensurate with their deserts, and with their uniform worth and claims upon the community."

ENLARGEMENT OF THE CAPITOL .- On Thursday the following architects were heard by the President and Cabinet, in explanation of their several plans, viz: Mr. Young, of Boston; Mr. Anderson, of New York; Mr. Walter, of Philadelphia; and Messrs. Cluskey, Mills and Elliot, of Washington.

Miss Cushman played Hamlet in Cincinnati, on Monday night, and the Commercial thinks "she is the Hamlet of the age."

METROPOLIS BUILDING ASSOCIATION. - We learn that the second monthly meeting of this association, held at Temperance Hall, on Wednesday evening last, was fully attended and spirited. The money sold brought 46, 441, and 44 per cent. "There was a gathering in of the clans from the counties of Hamilton, Clermont, Warren, Brown, and Clinton, near Loveland, on the Little Miami railway, to fix the site of a bridge. A large number were present. John S. Buckingham, a Democrat of the first water, addressed them at length on national affairs, opposing Gen. Cass, and advocating Gen.
